

The Confederate Reader: How the South Saw the War, 1989, 389 pages, Richard Barksdale Harwell, 0486259803, 9780486259802, Courier Dover Publications, 1989

For any student of the War Between the States, this treasury of contemporary documents - all but a few written by Southerners - offers a wealth of insight and perspectives on life in the South during the conflict, how newspapers and periodicals covered events, and how Southerners reacted to the disastrous struggle that disrupted their lives and ravaged their homes, farms, and cities. Selections have been arranged in an order that demonstrates the progress of the war, beginning with a South Carolina ordinance to secede from the Union and ending with a final message in 1865 from the last Confederate general to surrender.
